In many parts of Europe the candle business is carried on by large establishments with abundant capital. In Great Britain there was quite recently at least what would call a candle trust that yielded good returns. Anybody who has sojourned in a very rural English inn will not need to be told whence comes some of the demands for candles.

LION'S HEAD ALWAYS IN USE

From Earliest Times It Has Been Associated With Fountains and Flowing Water.

"The sun glows in the Lion," says Seneca, meaning that when the sun enters the sign of Leo at the summer solstice the highest temperature of the year is experienced. We may say on the other hand that the Babylonian astrologers thousands of years ago placed the king of beasts, the lion, and forceful lion, in that part of the zodiac which the sun enters at the summer solstice.

The constellation which is called Leo bears very little resemblance to the outline of a lion. Probably the name was originally applied only to its principal star, Regulus. It is to this constellation in the zodiac that we owe the countless water spewing lions' heads which are found in ancient and modern fountains, because in the latter part of July, while the sun is still in the sign Leo, the Nile is at its highest level.

Furthermore, the lion's head with widely open jaws is in itself very suitable for the mouth of a fountain or waterpout. This decorative motif was employed universally throughout the Greek-Roman world. Lions' heads are found used in this way at Athens, Ephesus, Olympia, Agrigento and countless other places. It is not quite certain that this employment of the lion's head originated in Egypt. Curtius describes an Assyrian bas-relief from Balran showing water streaming from a ring shaped vessel. A lion stands as if on guard on either side of the fountain.

The water clock, which was used in judicial proceedings, had the form of a lion and a name which means the guardian of the stream. Hence the idea of protection may have been the origin of the association of lions with fountains, and this custom may have originated in Asia.—Scientific American.

NOT IN HER SECOND BEST

Aunt Peace Had Retained Some of the Vanities Common to the World.

Quakers believe in a sober garb, but they are by no means without that quality which would be termed vanity in "the world's people." Aunt Peace Lawton had this quality to a marked degree.

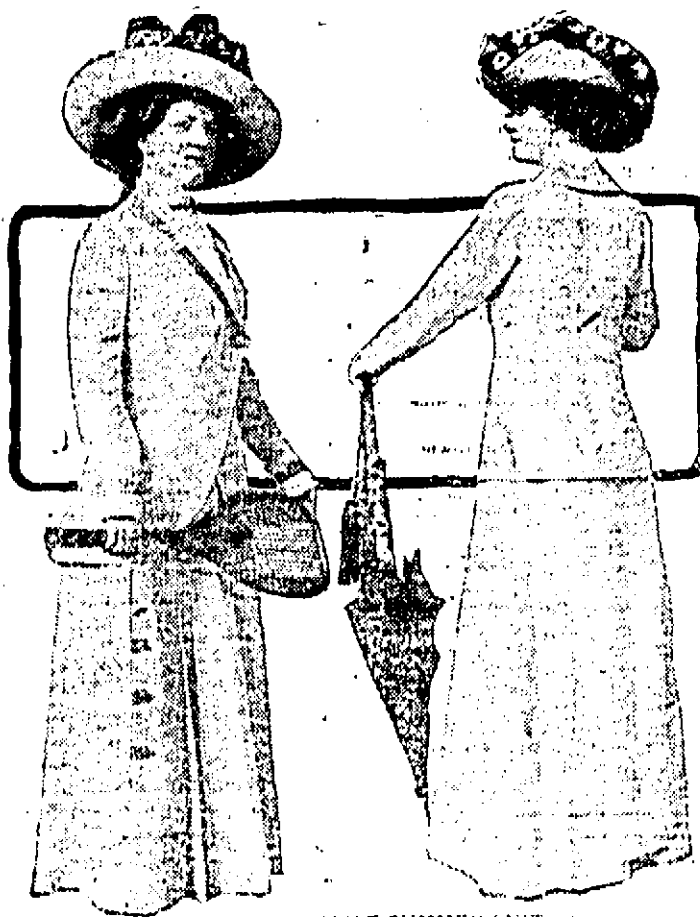

One day a strolling photographer asked permission to take a picture of the Lawton family, sitting on their velvet lawn. Mr. Lawton gave the permission, but his remarks were not approved by Aunt Peace. When it became evident that her gentle remonstrance had no effect, Aunt Peace said no more, but at the moment when the photographer said "Ready?" and exposed the film, Aunt Peace lifted her spotted handkerchief, spread to a snowy square, in both hands, hiding her face and head completely.

"Why, Aunt Peace, what made you do that?" asked her nephew, reproachfully, when he had permission from the photographer to speak.

"William," said the old lady, calmly, "if I see that I progress to be put in a picture with my second-best cap on and my kerchief sadly in need of an iron they is greatly mistaken."—Youth's Companion.

Commercial Possibility.

Little Ruth was busily occupied with her slate and pencil. Presently she ran to her father, whose face at the time required the services of a barber, climbed upon his knee and rubbing her chubby little hand over his chin, said: "Papa, can you sharpen slate pencils on that?"

TWO ATTRACTIVE SUMMER SUITS.
At Left—A Linen Suit Trimmed With Pleated Ribbons.
At Right—A Simple Mohair Suit by Cheruit.

Crisply, fresh and dainty is this pretty little suit of light green linen which is worn with a simple shirt-waist of lawn or batiste. The cutaway jacket fastens with a single button and the shawl collar and turned-back cuffs are trimmed with a narrow self-pleating of green ribbon matching the linen. The skirt has box pleats at front and back—a more becoming style to the active young girl than the narrow, banded skirt affected by older women this year—and trimmings of green ribbon appear on the skirt also. The buttons on the skirt match the large single button on the coat, both being of smoked pearl.

White mohair is the ideal suit material for summer afternoon wear. It will not muss like linen; it is most easily cleaned; it is cooler than a wool fabric, yet has all the daintiness and presence of a formal silk or wool material. Cheruit adores the light, silky English mohairs and loves to fashion them into charming coat and skirt suits of this character. This dainty suit has a short jacket, buttoned with bone buttons and the white silk lining shows in the deeply turned back collar.

Practice Economy

There are numerous ways to save money in lighting and cooking with gas in the way of installing the most modern equipment and operating it with a minimum of consumption.

Take the cabinet range, for instance. It is supplied with a baking oven, a broiling oven and a warming closet, all heated by the one set of burners, and so arranged that the woman using it need not stoop. We shall be pleased to have a salesman or demonstrator show you how a meal may be cooked at one operation with one set of burners going, at a very little expense.

In lighting, too, it is easily possible for you to secure much greater illumination than that supplied by the open flame burner and at much less expense. This is done by the use of an incandescent burner, which we sell at a small price and connect and adjust without additional charge.

Holiday Chosen as Opportunity to Reduce Operating Costs of Repair Department.

FINDS IT HARD TO EXPLAIN

Husband Undoubtedly Meant Well, but He Can't Get His Wife to Believe It.

Just to please his wife a Station Island man consented to go to a matinee on a day when the only seats they could get in the part of the house who preferred were single seats in different rows, says the New York Sun. When he went in the man promised the usher a quarter if he could get them seats together. At the end of the first act he noticed that the woman sitting beside him appeared detached. His wife looked lonely, so he said:

"Pardon me, are you here alone?"

"Just then the usher passed. The woman halted him.

"You must get me another seat," she said. "I cannot sit here any longer. This man has insulted me."

"Sure," said the usher. "We'll fix that all right. Come with me."

The woman said "brute" and followed the usher to the seat, occupied by the Station Island man's wife.

"This lady will change seats with you," said the usher.

"I'd advise you not to sit by that brute," said the indignant stranger.

"He will insult you. He insulted me."

"What did he say?" gasped the wife.

"He asked me if I were alone."

The Station Island man and his wife saw the play out. Between the acts he tried to explain.

"It was to get you near me," he said. "He has been saying the same thing most of his waking moments for the last six weeks, but he hasn't been able to make her believe it."

TRUTH IN REFERENCE GIVEN

Doubtful, However, If It Would Aid Bearer in Securing Another Position.

The bearer, Hayashi Kishi, has been in my service for the last four weeks. During that period he was trusted with the keys of the wine cellar, with the task of providing for the table and with the general regulation of the whole household, and these duties he discharged with much satisfaction to himself.

For a teetotal family, to whom cleanliness and punctuality are no objects, who use no stoneware or other breakable dishes, and who can view with Christian charity the loose ideas upon the subject of property of an untaught heathen brother, I can unhesitatingly say that he is admirably adapted.

It is purely out of personal regard for him that I am compelled to discontinue his services, for my substance has so diminished since he came into the household that I grieve to see his great acquisitive talents wasted upon such a barren field.

I shall be glad to hear that the earth contains another fool so confident as to take him into service and relieve a white man of his burden.

I have endeavored in this to comply both with his request and the truth.—Exchange.

KING BEE OF BUSINESS MEN

Writer Tells How Banker Stays Home and Has Money Brought to Him.

Half off, follows fighters in the battle of business—half off to the banker. He's the king bee of us all, says the New York Sun. The gentleman with the cash on hand, and all the world's his oyster. Other men must go out and scrape to get the coin—he stays at home and has it brought in by the delicatessen store, law firm and a typewriter, a second-hand adding machine and three bottles of ink—assorted colors; he builds a vault out of some brick and boiler iron; then he hangs out a hammered brass and gilded sign that reads in shiny letters "Bank," and people tear one another's clothing to get to him and exchange their cash for a neat little book covered with imitation leather and a pad of 50 checks.

With cheerful alacrity he takes their coin and cheerfully agrees to return it to them in installments between the hours of nine and three of any day, Sunday and all possible holidays excepted, and barring loss from fire, robbery, embezzlement, failure, panic or ordinary wear and tear. Then he loans it back to them for interest compounding annually and deducted in advance, providing they can accept the signatures of 11 responsible indorsers or give a mortgage on real estate or chattels worth seven times the loan. He advertises to pay the highest rate of interest on time deposits, and when you go to him with the hoardings of years of sweating toil he promptly advises you that money is so plentiful that it is only out of the goodness of his noble heart and his tender regard for you that he can pay you three per cent.

SENSIBLE MOTHER OF BOYS

Had Made Up Her Mind to Welcome Daughters-in-Law and Love Them.

No small number of men and women are acquiring sons and daughters-in-law these days, and the thought of it brings to mind the conversation of two women, one the mother of a boy, the other the mother of four of them.

"It will not be long now until Jim will want to be marrying. I dread the thought of it."

"Why?" questioned the mother of the four.

"I may not care for the girl."

"Well," said the other, "when my boys were small I figured it out in this way: If my boy could see enough in some girl to love her, marry her, and be willing to spend the rest of his days with her, surely there must be something in that girl I could find to like. I went on through the years expecting to love those four girls because they were the loved of my boys, and it has worked. I've two of the four daughters-in-law now, and I love them dearly for their own sakes. But I don't believe I would have had I dreaded the day."

Just a little story for the parents and parents-in-law of the brides and grooms to ponder over.

TOWN BUILT ON TOP OF ROCK

Ancient Human Habitation Known to Have Been Constructed Many Centuries Ago.

It would undoubtedly be a peculiar sensation to live on top of a mushroom. If the mushroom were of gigantic proportions and were planted so as to overhang the sea, the experience would be very similar to that of living in the town of Acma, which is three miles south of the Mesa Lacantada in Mexico.

The strange mushroom-like rock on which the town stands is a splendid specimen of fantastic erosion, having overhanging sides nearly 400 feet high. The top of the rock is comparatively level, and is about 70 acres in extent. It is indented with numerous great bays and is notched with dizzy chasms. The greater portion of it overhangs the sea like an immense mushroom, and the strangest part of all is that it has a town on top.

This town belongs to a past civilization. It is one of the most perfect specimens of the prehistoric Puebloan architecture. With inconceivable labor this town in the air was built and fortified for the safety of its inhabitants. It was reached by a mere trail of toe-holes up the stem of the mushroom. The age of the town is not known, but it was already old in 1540, when the first explorers visited it and wrote an account of its wonders, its people and their strange mode of living.—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Reward.

The less you require looking after, the more able you are to stand alone and complete your tasks, the greater your reward. Then if you cannot only do your work, but direct intelligently and effectively the efforts of others, your reward is in exact ratio, and the more people you direct, and the higher the intelligence you can rightly lead, the more valuable is your life.—Elbert Hubbard.

A New Kind.

A trained nurse garbed in her long triple-caps street uniform of cadet blue overheard two children commenting upon what it might mean, when one exclaimed confidently: "Oh, I know; she's a widow of a mail carrier."—De Lineator.

Plous, Suleide.

It was stated at an inquest held at Lindfield, Sussex, England, that prior to committing suicide, Edward Lambert read the burial service himself and recited the hymn "Abide With Me."

WASP IS FRIEND OF MINERS

Active in Ridding Cabins of the Pest of Spiders and Therefore Well-comed and Protected.

The miners of Colorado, who have built cabins on the mountain sides, know what a pest the small brown wood-spider proves to be. They throw their webs over your best clothes, cooking utensils and in every corner, where you can get them in your eyes and mouth. Not only that, but they will drop into the frying pan, water bucket, or upon the table where you are eating. But nature furnished a remedy and a friend when she gave the spider hawk. The name is given by miners to a small, steel-blue wasp, almost three-fourths of an inch in length. He can easily be recognized, by the quick, nervous strokes of his wings. They build a nest up among the rafters of your cabin, of wood-pulp or furze, from the outer coating of old, dead trees. Then they are ready for business. Every few minutes you can see your hawk climb up the rafters with a spider, sometimes carrying one to four or five times its own weight. Sometimes they get a spider so heavy that they will fall many times before they succeed in reaching their nest. They never give up, but keep on trying until they succeed. When the spider is safely placed in the nest, the female hawk deposits her egg in the dead body. The hawk lives only in pairs, as far as observation goes. They become rather tame, and seem to be obliged to you for building the spider-trap for their benefit.

YOU CAN NOW TAKE

CRYSTAL LAKE ICE

You can now take Crystal Lake Ice again this year. It is the ice that is pure and clean. Crystal Lake, from which it is cut, is surrounded by the virgin forest. Crystal Lake is one of the clearest bodies of water in the country—you can see the bottom at a depth of 20 feet. Crystal Lake is 242 feet above Lake Michigan and therefore free from seepage. The source of inlet are pure crystal springs.

Ice For Domestic Purposes Should Be Absolutely Pure

You use it in ices, in water, teas, refreshments, etc., and it's economy to be carefully. Crystal Lake-ice is shaved before being stored away to remove any dust that may have accumulated while freezing. It is the safest ice to use for domestic purposes.

THE SCHOOL TEACHER.

In a recent issue of the Christian Science Monitor the following editorial on the school teachers of the nation appears and is worth careful consideration by all persons interested in the care and education of the coming generation. It is a bit historical and starts by stating that by the middle of the fifteenth century the foundations for the purposes of educating the youth were found to be not enough for the work. They had been religious and ecclesiastical in character and had been generally of two sorts, the grammar school and the song school. In the first the schoolmaster taught usually Latin, and in the second, the song school, the young schoolmaster taught singing, reading and probably writing. These schools were connected with monasteries and cathedrals, and with the church and college schools emphasized the fact that education was in the hands of the clergy; nor in fairness must it be forgotten that for centuries it was the church that gave England and Europe what education the people had.

But there were now forces knocking at the door: the Renaissance, with its polish and its intellectual skepticism was not felt as quickly in England as in Europe, yet now was come, Henry VII, was to come to the throne and begin that work of construction which, carried on by Henry VIII, and Elizabeth, would be felt today. Like sunrise in the heavens, the first faint whispers of the new world slowly spread themselves in men's imaginations. On all sides men were stretching themselves and throwing off, one by one, the child and heavy garments of mediocrity, and were seeking they knew not what, save that it must be different. This showed itself in every part of men's daily existence, and distinctly so in matters of education, for new schools were founded all over England, many of them by laymen and with lay teachers. Guilds and municipal corporations maintained schools: in Coventry, Ipswich, Stockport and Ewelme, schools were established by laymen or corporations. We are told that in St. Peter's school in York not one of the three schoolmasters was a priest at this time, and "at Bridgwater in 1565, an ordinance was passed that no priest should keep school." Just as the judgments and the practice of the law had passed into lay hands, the work of the schoolmaster was recognized as one that was better done by him that would busy himself with instruction and nothing else, the people, religious systems could not give them what they needed.

The movement to which we have alluded has never ceased since that day in English-speaking countries, and more reason than all others have Americans to thank the school teacher and protect his work. This work is not done to the accompaniment of glorious triumphs; the chariot and shouting legions sweep up the Via Sacra, but the pedagogues only smooth the way on his tablets afresh and continue yesterday's work with the knowledge of tomorrow's. Cannon may thunder and reverberate in Massachusetts Bay or at Aboukir, but Polly and Dick must be taught their alphabet quite the same. If they are taught well we praise them and forget the teacher, and if not we remember him long enough to be impatient. When Thomson spoke of teaching the young idea how to shoot, he put it so well that his words have become painfully true, but what they express is nothing more nor less than the work that is being patiently done by thousands of men and women throughout the country; a work perhaps more important and less well paid than any profession or business in the world.

The duties of a teacher in America are peculiar in that he is called, in the mass, to deal with a variety of subjects and is not given much time for them. The reasons for this are twofold, the natural desire to accomplish as much as possible, a desire that must always be felt in a new civilization, and the much less wholesome quality of superficiality that today is a danger to the country. No democracy can afford superficiality; each citizen through the working of that very rule which has made him a citizen must be prepared to give his best to the community. We may be independent as a nation, but we are dependent on each other for the proper transaction of the nation's affairs. There is no danger that any one will know a subject too well. There is too much chance that we shall not know it nearly well enough. Thoroughness should be our motto and aim; the person that teaches us our first step in this thoroughness is the school teacher who, if he be given a fair chance and a hearty support, will show us not so much thoroughness in the amount of what we learn as thoroughness in the learning. There is no royal road to learning and no one in a democracy ought to say that there is. If there were, we should have an invertible perfection, entirely flat and colorless. Thoroughness means cohesion, and it is cohesion that is vital to this country; mere volume of material prosperity is as nothing to the presence of a people who have as their rule in all things to do everything as it should be done. A distorted fact is no fact, but distorted it will always be in our eyes if we only half see it. It is the school teacher that can arm us against ignorance and its depressing effect on the common weal, and it is the school teacher whom we have as guest today.

The work of these men and women touches us at every point and reaches everywhere; because it is so modest and so general let us not forget that it must be upheld and strengthened for the good of our country.

Many friends of the late Benjamin Dunwiddie are rallying to the support of his son, Stanley G. Dunwiddie, who is a candidate for district attorney. It promises to make this contest an interesting one to watch with Charles Henningsway as Dunwiddie's opponent.

The office of sheriff is one of the most eagerly sought for positions in the county and of the candidates now in the field Ramsey should have the edge, having been a candidate before and being well known throughout the county at large.

Jeffries says that he does not remember what he did in the recent battle between races at Reno, but the general sporting public remember very clearly that in the fifteenth round he heard sweet music and saw stars while his dusky opponent stood and showed his gold teeth.

Farmers are complaining about the lack of rain and forest fires are raging in the north woods. Between the two the crop reports are said to be very poor, but there never was a summer when something did not happen early in the season just before the plentiful harvest of the autumn.

The prohibitionists announce that they will have a candidate for congress in the field this fall in the first congressional district. This sounds like business and much more sensible than the county option plan.

Janitors of the public buildings should see to it that the property of the city does not run to weeds. In the rear of the library is a fine crop of burdock that are going to seed and yet they are not even "cultivated."

The insurgent press would have the public understand that Roosevelt is an insurgent of the roughest type and still they do not know the man of Oyster Bay half as well as they think they do.

There are still some saloon applications that have not been acted on and some of the fifty-one applicants are wondering what the council will do when it meets again.

E. T. Fairchild appears to be making friends throughout the state in his campaign for governor and his speeches ring true and sound the keynote of republicanism—"Loyalty to Truth."

There is many a man in the hot offices these days that remembers the old swimming hole or the morning plunge in the lake or river of his boyhood days.

Janesville passed through a very quiet Fourth. Really a same celebration, and no one was hurt.

Aeroplane are becoming so common that mention of races between them are now being put under the baseball games by sporting editors.

Roosevelt plans a trip to Kentucky. To arms, Cal. Watterson!—Milwaukee Sentinel.

After reading Capt. Lewis' brilliant opening address we suggest the adoption by him for campaign purposes of the delightful selection, "He doesn't belong to the regulars, he's only a volunteer."—Milwaukee News.

There can hardly be any good reason, considering the weather, why people should not dance barefooted, if they want. The foolishness consists of paying money to see the act. —Madison Journal.

A report from Milwaukee says that a resident there lost a sum of money from his trousers' pocket while asleep at night. The dispatch does not state that he is married, evidently considering this in the light of superfluous information.—Green Bay Gazette.

The last nail in the Democratic coffin was pounded in yesterday when the United States treasurer reported a surplus of over nine million dollars in the treasury as against a deficit of fifty-eight million a year ago, a splendid showing for the Taft administration.—Wauson Record-Herald.

Secretary Coblentz of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture denies with emphasis the recent gloomy reports of "cropkillers" concerning the outlook for grain in that state. He says the corn outcome will be one of the greatest in the state's history, and is evidently perfectly satisfied as to the outlook for wheat, oats, he says, "promises the greatest yield yet; while alfalfa and grasses are fine." Undoubtedly other regions where the crop has been sent similarly "discouraging" reports will come into line with Kansas.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

The Democrats will have to vote in their own primaries. If they want to see the party name placed on the ballot, here in Marinette county the Democrats have never polled a twenty per cent vote in the primaries. This year if they do not there will be only one ticket on the official ballot at the general election. The state chairman of the Democratic party is sending out a special call to the voters to poll a big vote in the primaries. The Democrats are not feeling kindly either toward the La Follette people who introduced and had passed in the legislature a 20 per cent vote by the Democrats in the primaries.—Marinette Eagle-Star.

THE POET PHILOSOPHER

By WALT MASON.

(Copyright, 1909, by George Mathew Adams.)

Wait till you're old and hoary, wait till you're bent and gray, before you complain, with a voice full of pain: "I am so tired today!" You are so young and active.

You are so young and strong! You tired of the game, and feeling no shame, singing a drollard's song. Wait till the shades have gathered, wait till the night is near, then you may moan as you walk alone, down to the vale of fear.

You with your little burden, strapped to your stalwart back! And you would repine and utter a wail over the thorns in the track? Wait till your friends have left you, wait till your heart is tired, and you're mocked by hosts of the sheeted ghosts of things you have long desired. Youth is the greatest treasure! Youth is the world's red gold! And the man who slights under morning skies, deserves to be stricken old.

LONG LOST BROTHER
REVEALS HIMSELF
TO HOWARD A. COLE

Frank C. Arnold of U. S. Navy Abandoned Jaunt From Baltimore to Frisco and Came to Janesville on Strange Mission.

Frank C. Arnold, a one-time Janesville resident who has served in the U. S. navy for the past ten years and who, in company with A. R. Wismann of Cincinnati, started to walk from Baltimore to San Francisco on May 19, arrived in Janesville yesterday and after locating and revealing himself to a long lost brother, abruptly decided to discontinue the long stroll, resign from the service, and go into business in Milwaukee. The brother is Howard Arthur Cole, now nineteen years of age, who was adopted into the family of Nelson Cole immediately following his father's tragic death at Maywood, Ill. July 29, 1896. It is claimed that a uncle, Fred Arnold, acted as guardian without any authority whatsoever, and consented to the adoption of the then child (Howard being at that time four years of age) without consulting the oldest brother, Louis, who had passed his twenty-first birthday and was entitled to at least be heard in the matter. However, this matter appears to have been threshed out in Judge Sale's court about that time or some months thereafter.

The boys' mother died in 1893 and two years later the father, Charles J. Arnold, married a Mrs. Lindsey of Cranston and came to Janesville to live. On July 1, 1896, they separated, Frank Arnold stayed with his grandfather, the Hon. Josiah Arnold, who built and lived in Judge Sale's present home on Wisconsin street, and the little boy, Arthur, was placed with the Cole family as a boarder. The father was planning to take up his residence in the far west but stopped over at Maywood, near Chicago, to visit his brother, Louis, and there met his death. Frank Arnold, afterward lived with his uncle for a time. It is alleged that the Cole family discouraged all attempts on the part of Frank Arnold, now the oldest living survivor of the family, to communicate with his brother, Howard, and changed the latter's surname to Cole. At any rate Cole did not know that his original name was Arnold and that he had a brother living until Frank revealed himself to him at the Hotel London last evening. The meeting was brought about through the instrumentality of Lawrence Doty, who is here from Chicago, and who helped Frank locate the young man on the streets and introduced the visitor as a friend of his named Williams.

Frank Arnold has seen service in Sumatra and Africa as well as in many European waters during his ten years before the mast. He was a chief cookman on the U. S. cruiser "Yankee," the parent ship of the Atlantic torpedo fleet, when it was wrecked on Housa and Chikona reef between New Bedford and Bradford, Mass., in a fog, on Sept. 26, 1908, and after his four months' furlough he was to report for duty at the China station. He carries credentials from Secretary Loeb, James A. Finch of the Department of Justice, a letter from Ex-Governor William H. Upham who was at one time associated with his father in the lumber business at Cornsantown, Wis., certificates from the mayor and postmasters of many cities, and an appointment to the position of special policeman of the metropolitan police force of the district of Columbia, issued March 20, 1910, which virtually gives him the powers of a U. S. Marshal. He and his brother, Arthur Cole, are nephews of the late Judge Moses Pritchard and the family was well known here a decade and a half ago.

Mr. Arnold started to walk to Janesville from Chicago Saturday afternoon at three o'clock and arrived here Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock. The brother, Howard Arthur Cole, is at present attending one of the business colleges here. Whether he will go to live with his new-found brother and have his name changed back to Arnold, after he is twenty-one, remains to be seen.

JURY RETURNED A JUDGMENT OF $90

For the Plaintiff in the Action of Susan Rodman Versus James Lamb Tried in Municipal Court.

In the case of Susan Rodman vs. James Lamb, brought by the plaintiff to recover $100 which she claimed as due her for services as nurse and housekeeper, the jury in municipal court last evening after a long trial returned a verdict awarding her $90. Mr. Lamb had offered $25.00 in settlement before the action was commenced and had the judgment been under that amount it would have been necessary for the plaintiff to bear the costs. Mrs. Rodman came here from New York state for the purpose of acquiring residence and obtaining a divorce. It appears that the necessary work had not elapsed when a law was passed making two years' residence the preliminary requirement. She is a relative of Mrs. Lamb and visited at the Lamb home for a time before she took up household work, appreciation of which was manifested by two gifts of $25 made Mr. Lamb before an understanding was reached regarding a definite compensation.

Quantity of Beer Stolen: Half of the contents of a barrel filled with Madison bottled beer were stolen from a car at the St. Paul transfer station in this city on the night of July 4. A half-witted man of small stature and smooth shaven is under suspicion.

Presbyterian Trees To Go: As a preliminary to the conversion of the dwelling place adjoining the Grubb store on North Jackson street into a store with a full width sidewalk in front, two large elms are being removed. The walk in front of the Presbyterian parsonage and church is about two feet above grade and in need of repair. If any material changes are made it will be necessary to cut down six great elms. Alderman Lowell and Evans of the Third ward and City Engineer Kerch inspected the premises this morning.

One More Bar Application: Ole Sorenson has filed an application for a license to open a saloon in the building at 21 North Academy street which, through certain charges filed by the City Attorney with the police commission, has gained unpleasant notoriety as a restaurant.

MISS EMMA MACLEAN
AND HARRY K. GROUT

Were Wedded in Presence of Company of Relatives and Intimate Friends Last Evening.

In the presence of a company of relatives and intimate friends, Miss Emma MacLean, daughter of Mr. Collin C. MacLean, and Harry K. GROUT of Canal Dover, Ohio, were wedded at the home of the bride's mother in the Michels apartments at eight o'clock last evening. Rev. J. C. Hazen read the service before a bank of wild asparagus fern and daisies in the parlor and Knerr and Hatch's orchestra played the wedding march. The Misses Dorothy MacLean, Helen Cannon, Caroline Richardson, and Sybil Richardson attended the ceremony.

The bride was attended by her bridesmaid, a gown of white muslin trimmed with duchess lace and a wreath of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies.

Following congratulations, an elaborate repast was served and the orchestra rendered a series of pleasing and appropriate musical numbers. The bride's table was decorated with white roses and ferns.

A burst of song and a shower of rice were features of the farewell festivities. Mr. and Mrs. GROUT boarded an automobile, their supposed plan being to board a train for Milwaukee at Milford.

As a matter of fact they were only driven about town for a time and took their departure for Chicago this morning. At the conclusion of a brief visit they will go to house-keeping at Canal Dover where the groom is manager of one of the Woolworth & Co. stores.

Among the out of town guests present at the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. L. E. GROUT, parents of the groom, Judd GROUT and Miss Berice GROUT—a brother and sister—all of Cedar Rapids, Ia. Mr. and Mrs. C. P. MacLean of Sioux City, Ia. Mrs. George Woolworth of Madison, Wis. W. W. Sander and the Misses Marvel and Georgia Sander, all of Cleveland.

MANY CONTESTANTS
FOR SLOGAN PRIZE

Over Two Hundred Answers Sent to Secretary DeArmand—Announcement of Winner Later.

Mr. DeArmand, the new secretary of the Janesville Industrial and Commercial Club reports that there were over two hundred answers sent in for the Slogan Contest. Considering that this contest was only open to school children and was started about the time the schools closed, this number of answers is very gratifying to Mr. DeArmand and the Committee, who will now try and pick out the two best suggestions. This work will take several days, for there are many good suggestions, and as the choice of the Committee is to be final and is of vital importance in future advertising and promotion work for a greater Janesville, the work of picking the right slogan will go on slowly.

Since the new secretary took up his work many business men who are not members of the Janesville Industrial and Commercial Club, have expressed to Mr. DeArmand their desire to become members.

Janesville is right now entering a new era in her history—an era of progress, of growth, of solid up-building. Every man in this city who pays taxes or who is interested in any way in Janesville should become a member of this club and put his shoulder to the wheel that will turn this city into a real metropolis.

O, YOU KIDS. THE PLACE WHERE EVERYBODY HAS A GOOD TIME.

(By Special Correspondent.) An impetus within the last few years, New York City.—The playground is no longer considered a fact, but an movement, which has received such actual necessity to every well organized municipality. The lives of hundreds of children have been saved through the efforts of philanthropists and civic organizations by boosting the playground idea.

In New York city alone thousands of children may be seen at the various playgrounds enjoying the summer months as only boys and girls can enjoy an outing. Were it not for the playgrounds provided by public and private funds these children would be forced to exist throughout the summer months in back alleys and third floors of tenements, where sunlight is almost unknown and fifth prevails. In the playgrounds on any hot afternoon joy runs riot and many an older person is refreshed and his life made happier by watching the children at play. Now York is only typical of the thousands of cities in which playgrounds are afforded the children.

EDWARD W. PARKER, Well Known Mining Expert to Head New Government Bureau.

Washington, D. C.—Edward W. Parker, chief statistician of the geological survey, will undoubtedly become director of the new bureau of mining, created by the last session of congress. Mr. Parker is a mining expert of world-wide recognition. He is just 50 years old and in the prime of his very active life. He is known as an author of many mining books and has made a special study of the economic side of mining, and it was because of his intimate knowledge of the situation that he was appointed a member of the committee to investigate anthracite coal conditions.

The bureau of mining created during the session of congress just closed, will have a great work before them and Mr. Parker is looked upon as the man who can fill this position to the best advantage for all.

Bournemouth, Eng., July 6.—With thousands of visitors here from all parts of the United Kingdom and from the Continent as well, the elaborate fete with which the centenary of Bournemouth is to be celebrated were ushered in today with a grand naval and military tournament. The participants included numerous regiments and naval detachments which have won fame in the annual tournaments at Olympia.

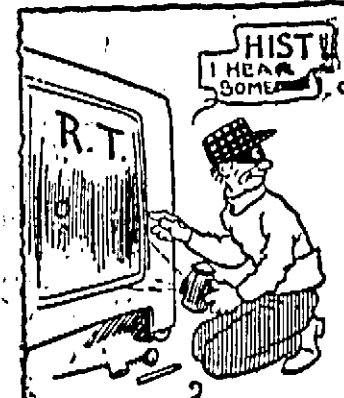

A program of gigantic proportions and much variety has been prepared for the celebration, which will cover a period of ten days. In addition to historical pageants, floral battles, concerts, masque balls and other carnival features, there will be a series of aviation contests for which prizes aggregating $10,000 are offered. Balls, fireworks, White, Moore & Irabazon and a number of other noted aviators are included among the entries.

J.M. BOSTWICK & SONS. GREAT DOINGS IN VUDOR SHADES J.M. BOSTWICK & SONS.

An unusual opportunity comes our way to offer Vudor Porch Shades at prices that they can never be offered at again when this lot is sold. They can not last always—would advise early selection. While the quantity is fairly large we anticipate that they will sell fast at the sale prices.

We have made arrangements with the Hough Shade Corporation whereby we can offer you Vudor Porch Shades that are slightly imperfect in the weaving or the matching of the wooden strips. Some are perfect in every way but are discontinued colors. In most of these it would take an expert to discover where the imperfection is, and for all practical purposes are just as serviceable as those from regular stock. We offer them to you at prices within the reach of everyone. Vudor Porch Shades have now become not a luxury, but almost a necessity. They screen out the heat and glare of the sun and at the same time let in the cooling breezes. They shut out the view from the street but not from the porch. In other words, you can see out but no one can see in, thus making your porch as private as any room in the house. In fact, you make a comfortable living room of your porch, cool, sanitary and secluded.

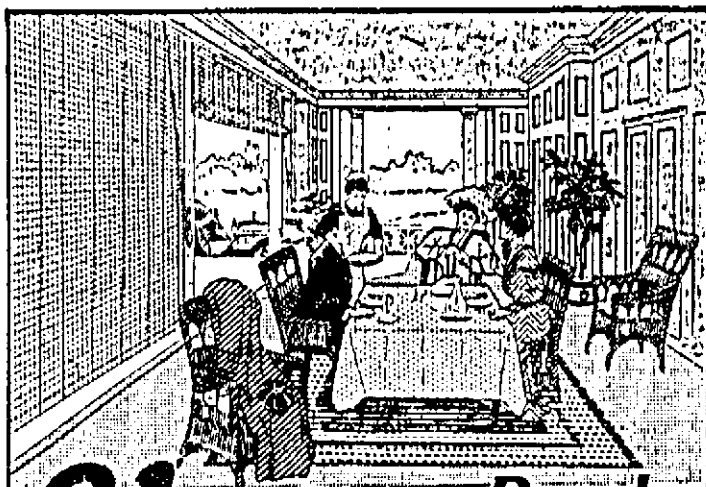

This is a rare opportunity to "shade" your porch for a very small expense. Don't let the chance go by.

4-FOOT SHADES

Perfect in every way, but of discontinued colors in red and very dark green. Some slightly imperfect in the matching, some having two colors of strips, others not perfectly stained. Mottled green, plain green, brown and red. Regular price $2.25. All go at the remarkable price, each.....98¢

The Vudor Chair Hammock is strong but simple in construction. Weighs but a few pounds but will support the heaviest person easily. Takes but a moment to adjust from a reclining to a sitting position. It can be raised or lowered to any height. It is one of the most satisfactory articles ever devised for porch use.

Ask to see how they work in actual use. Price, with pillow, $3.50 each. HUNG FREE.

6-FOOT SHADES

This is the size most used. The imperfections in this lot will be hard to find. A little off color or mismatched stripes, but nothing that will in any way mar the appearance of the shade. The colors are terra-cotta, mottled olive green, plain olive, dark greens, and brown. Regular price $3.00, all to close out at, each.....$1.29

The Vudor Reinforced Hammocks

These are acknowledged to be the best wearing hammock on the market on account of the reinforced center where the strain all comes. The both ends are corded with extra size cords so arranged that THEY WILL NOT BREAK. See them in the Curtain Dept. Prices $2.25, $3.00 and $4.00.

Cool, Airy, Shady, Private AND THEY LAST FOR YEARS

8-FOOT SHADES

In discontinued colors, otherwise perfect, also some that are miss mottled in the colorings, or have an imperfect weave. Colors, red, brown, green and matched green, or terra-cotta. Regular price $4.00, all go in at $1.95 each.

We also wish to tell you about the VUDOR CHAIR HAMMOCK, combination of a morris chair and a hammock, possessing the most enjoyable features of both.

INDIAN IS NOT UNDERSTOOD

White Race Has Proved Utterly Unable to Fathom Pride and Philosophy of the Red Man.

Even among the five civilized tribes there still remain many communities wholly full blood. These people drift together, following their own ideas of life, speaking their own language and residing before the whites with the same strange reserve and pride that characterized them in their wild state.

Although claiming the name of several Christian denominations, and following certain beliefs with devoutness, their ways of thinking, their dislike of innovation and their aversion to work have made them withdraw to the mountain districts. Whether this so-called reserve comes from pride or a distrust of the white man or timidity or merely a stubborn conservatism it produces the same result: the backward and nonprogressive Indian.

There is, too, a certain mystic quality that holds the Indian aloof, says the Southern Workman; a quality that we do not understand and with which there is little sympathy in our everyday life. He is so much of a philosopher that he looks upon our strenuous life with some contempt, disdaining our efforts for personal comfort and material advancement with the remark that "the white man is heap trouble to himself." White people call him lazy because he does not care to exert himself for these things which seem important to whites, and yet to some religious ceremonial or some artistic expression his application is persistent and the "patience of an Indian" has passed into a proverb.

CAN BE CARRIED TOO FAR

Relaxed Muscles, Indulged In to the Extreme, Detrimental to the Health.

We read much of the benefit of relaxing, which is true as far as concerns the nervous and temper; there is another kind of relaxing, that of muscles, that is dangerous if made a life habit.

It is all right not to keep oneself tense; to let everything go occasionally and just stop. The trouble lies in making this slopping permanent.

If a girl or boy gets into the habit of dropping his shoulders, rolling, sprawling over a table, crouching over books or game do you know what happens? The ligaments are weakened, the muscles lose tone, sometimes, even the bones grow distorted if the habit is acquired while young bones are still soft.

It is not pleasant to be continually nagging at children, "stand up!" "keep your elbows off the table," "hold your shoulders up," and keep up the good work though it means daily rows.

Such things are more than a question of good manners; they mean good health. It is a big temptation to let things go, but remember that crooked backs, cramped lungs, distorted hips and shoulders, badly poised necks, all the organs of our body out of place, follow muscles that are not kept stretched to their natural position.

Women Ahead.

As women, we should not quarrel with our horizon, nor should we showlessly arraign poor man because he has civilized us at his expense. We must realize simply that emotionally we are centuries ahead of him, and that we shall have to wait patiently for him to grow up and meantime moderate our steps to his just as we do when we take the baby out for an airing.—Woman's Life.

Freaks of Lightning.

Lightning has struck, plucked feathers from and hidden out of chickens and, better than some cooks, roasted them to a proper turn for the table. It has roasted apples on the tree and corn on the stalk, and has struck geese and potato vines and cooked the geese and tubers in the very ground.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

THERE is a certain form of selfishness or thoughtlessness—the two are pretty often synonymous, I think—that irritates me more every time I run up against it.

It is the selfishness of the women—less frequently the men—of leisure, who manages her affairs so as to travel on the trolley at rush hours.

I think such a person has absolutely no right to a seat or to consideration of any kind.

It fairly makes my blood boil when I see a woman, who, by her general appearance, I am very sure has been on a pleasure or shopping excursion, get on a crowded car at the rush hour and accept a seat from a man who has evidently been working all day, and who, according to my way of thinking, has twice the right she has to that seat.

I thoroughly believe in civility, but I think it should have a back of justice and there is no justice in such a proceeding. The idea of civility is that the strong should help the weak, and the man who has been working at the top of his strength all day is no stronger than the lady who has been amusing herself.

Another street car offender that I have no use for is the woman of either the working or the leisure class who always goes and stands ostentatiously in front of whatever males dare to be seated while she is standing.

Receiving a seat under these conditions seems to me like receiving a gift or an invitation after many hints. Myself, I would rather stand all night than get a seat that way.

Whether it is too conspicuous for a young girl to rise and give her seat to an elderly man or woman while men are sitting, is a question of trolley car ethics that I have occasionally heard discussed.

It seems to me that if the man have been given a chance to rise and have not availed themselves of it, it is quite the kind and proper thing for a young girl to offer her seat to an elderly woman.

I don't quite like to see young girls do it for a man, though, because I have an idea that the mental discomfort he undergoes in realizing that he has reached the point where he needs to accept such a thing from a woman, often counterbalances the physical comfort he gets from the seat.

In the same way I am very chary how I offer my seat to a woman not much older than I am. I think she is quite as apt to resent the inference the action conveys as to be pleased by it.

I shall never forget my own feelings on a similar experience some years ago. I had been under terrible mental and physical strain and probably looked twice my age, but I could not help instinctively resenting it when I was simply reminded of the fact by a girl hardly younger than I was who hustled on my taking her seat.

But whether it is always the wisest and kindest thing for her not to sit down while an older woman or an elderly man is standing.

And if you are ever puzzled by a question of street car ethics I fancy just the best test to put it, is the supreme test of the golden rule.

For I have an idea that politeness in street cars is essentially what it is everywhere else.

—To do and say
"The kindest thing in the kindest way."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By Rose Terrill.

If thinking makes conditions then there will be no lowering of prices of household supplies next winter. The pages of newspapers and magazines are devoted to predictions of the dire disaster awaiting the housekeeper of limited income in 1911.

Then must she be like the bee—get ready for severe weather by making honey now.

Combination has been the secret of business success, we are told—why ## not try it in domestic affairs?

Let a neighborhood combine and by hiring a rig and taking turns do the marketing for a half dozen? There is no reason why there should not be money saved this way during the summer months. If the country lies at hand some one with a carriage or an auto could purchase eggs and butter and various fresh vegetables at market prices from the country woman, who will be delighted to make such sales.

Canned goods went up steadily last winter. They will start high next fall and will probably do the ascension act as steadily. Now is the time to get ahead of them. Vegetables are as easily canned as fruits, and not a bit more trouble. Buy fresh and fine stuffs for canning. Flavor counts there more than anywhere. The government is leading bulletins for canning vegetables which are very valuable. The kinds of jars and the methods of different vegetables are very explicitly set forth, but we are all negligent about securing these things, so I will give you one or two of these tested hints, but it would be wise to secure the whole bulletin. No. 359 from the department of agriculture and read the reasons why such care in sterilization is necessary. We think we know why because we understand a little about germs and bacteria, but we, as a whole, are still rather ignorant, or seem to be, when the way we do some things is considered.

To can corn.

Select the ears of fullest grain while still sweet and before it has begun to harden. Husk and brush the silk off with a stiff brush. Shave the grains off with a keen knife, pack in the jars, which have been sterilized by boiling for from 10 to 15 minutes.

Senson with about one teaspoonful of salt to the quart and fill the jar to the top with cold water. Put the sterilized rubber ring on and place the sterilized glass top on loosely, place in the washbowl on a false bottom of either wood or wire, leaving space between the jars. Pour in three inches of cold water, put the cover on the boiler and boil for one hour. At the end of the time raise the boiler cover and allow the steam to escape and tighten the tops. Next day loosen top and repeat boiling operation in same way. Tighten cover again when an hour of boiling has elapsed. Repeat a third time and then if you have the jars that are fastened by a spring you may test them by releasing the spring and lifting by the top. If all is as it should be the top will not come off. Otherwise the process may be repeated. If properly done the corn will keep perfectly. Beans and peas may be canned in the same way.

OUR SORROWFUL SELVES.

BY MARY BURNELL.

Some one has said that tears are never shed except in self-pity. I do not know how true this is, but certainly many are the times when our sorrow is not for existing conditions as they are, but existing conditions as they affect ourselves.

How are the pills a throats who do not at least begin from a motive of personal interest.

Humility is naturally selfish, however much we may disguise the sad truth.

We love selfishly and we hate selfishly. We do good because of selfishness, and we certainly never do ill save for the same reason.

Why is it? What is this self after all that we make it a God and burn incense constantly at the shrine?

My house—my wife—my husband—my creed—my God! Ay, even the Lord of all is made a matter of personal possession by many of the most ridiculous of Christ.

And after all this great creature before whom we would have all the world bend in recognition resolves itself into a small handful of dust!

"But," you will say, "it is not the flesh—but the soul that makes man great!"

You are right but how often do you really think of your soul save as something that is going to live after you? It is the soul of you that should be so big and fine that this covering of flesh cannot disguise it. If we were stripped of our flesh and went in our souls for a while I fear that we would fail to recognize the shrunken and shriveled thing which we have spent a lifetime in strengthening.

Love of others is the real food for spiritual growth.

This is not a word for your neighbor, but a word for you. What have you done today to make a luminous brilliance to your soul? Did you take advantage of a less shrewd friend in a business deal? Did you say an unkind word to the office boy because you could fire him if he answered back, and he dared not even look suldon if you were impertinent to him? Did you speak lightly of some young girl who wounded your senses of propriety? Did you brand some business associate in the eyes of another?

If you are a woman, did you do some woman an irreparable injury by word or look? Did you shut the door in the face of some sad and weary book agent? Did you refuse the smile of gracious recognition to some woman lower down in the social scale? Did you hurt the heart—and life—of some child? When you grow tired did you let the burden of your weariness on the shoulders of some one about you who was helpless to resist you?

It is so easy to forget that God is looking. So easy to "grab all we can and give as little as we may."

Don't feel sorry for yourself, but let someone else worry off and try to give comfort. It is a great way to dry tears. When you feel cross force yourself to do some kind action which is absolutely unselfish. The radiant heart will grow cheerful under such treatment, the weariest load be lightened.

Try it and pass the good word along!

Modified it.

"How was the hotel you stopped at?" "So bad that father swore he would never go there again." "That was strong language." "Oh, I don't know. At first he swore that he would never go anywhere again."

The Optimist's Corner

Daily Helps to Health and Happiness

By GEORGE F. BUTLER, A.M., M.D.

Mrs. Wigge says: "The way to get cheerful is to smile when you feel bad, to think about somebody else's headache when your own is most bustle, to keep on believing the sun is smiling when the clouds are thick enough to cut." If sadness threatens fill your mind with joyous thoughts; force them in so there will not be room for sad thoughts. Build air castles, picture a bright, successful day. Get into the sunlight and let the sunshine into your soul. Light, joy, gladness, and harmony are your best protectors; discord, darkness, and sickness cannot exist where they are. Mardon says: "Until we can master our moods, we can never do our best work. No man who is at the mercy of his moods is a free man. He only is free who can rise to his dominion in spite of his mental enemies. If a man must consult his moods every morning to see whether he can do his best work, or only some unimportant task during the day; if he must look at his mental thermometer when he rises, to see whether his courage is rising or falling, he is a slave; he cannot be successful or happy."

And there is a point that we want to make especially clear to all, because it refers to all of our goods. Our coffees, or teas, our spices, our flavoring extracts, etc., etc., we know to be of the highest standard and that our prices generally are lower than elsewhere for goods of equal quality. Cook in Comfort

You no longer need wear yourself out with the weakening heat of an intensely hot kitchen. You can cook in comfort.

Here is a stove that gives no outside heat. All its heat is concentrated at the burners. An intense blue flame (hotter than either white or red) is thrown upwards but not around. All the heat is utilized in cooking—none in outside heating.

New Perfection

entirely removes the discomfort of cooking. Apply a match and immediately the stove is ready. Instantly an intense heat is projected upwards against the pot, pan, kettle or boiler, and yet there is no surrounding heat—no smell—no smoke.

Why? Because The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is scientifically and practically perfect. You cannot use too much wick—it is automatically controlled. You get the maximum heat—no smoke. The burner is simple. One wick with a cloth cleans it—consequently there is no smell.

The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is wonderful for year-round use, but especially in summer. Its heat operates upward to pan, pot, or kettle, but not beyond or around. It is useless for heating a room.

It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot. It has long turquoise-blue enamel chimneys. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

TEMPLARS' PICNIC

District Lodge I. O. G. T. Celebrated
Independence Day at Peck's Point.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Newville, July 5.—The District Lodge I. O. G. T. celebrated the Fourth of July with a picnic held on Peck's Point, inviting friends of the order, particularly those who had formerly been members. There was a good attendance at the outing, which would have been larger but for the fact that the United States delegation to Koshong Station instead of Pleasant View. The day, however, was most pleasantly spent. After a bountiful dinner, quite a number enjoyed a launch ride. Other events of interest were the races of which there were nine, including girls', boys', murdle races, fat ladies', three-legged and hurdle races.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hammond of Edgerton, were here for the picnic.
Mr. and Mrs. Fred Truman of Lima, visited at Frank Sherman's Monday.

Whole oil still has its uses and wholesale commands prices that make the search for it well worth the capital invested. Once a culling has its great utility modern com-

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Center, July 6.—A very simple but pretty wedding took place today at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Paul-er, when their daughter, Miss Vera Louisa, was united in matrimony to Fred Carl Gransee. At ten o'clock

after which the few impressive words unfolding the destinies of the young people were spoken by the Rev. J.

MISS VERA FULLER OF CENTER,
WHOSE WEDDING OCCURRED
TODAY.

Immediate family and a few friends.
An automobile was awaiting outside the door and, after the ceremony and the expression of hearty congratulations by those present, Mr. and Mrs. Gransee, accompanied by the bride's cousin, Miss Ethel Shaw, and Miss Blanche Wheeler, were driven to Janesville, taking the train from there to Woodstock, Ill. At Woodstock an aunt of the bride met them and conveyed the bridal couple to her home, where a sumptuous wedding dinner was served. The house was very prettily decorated with crantious and smilax.

The bride is a very popular young lady of this locality. She was the winner of the first prize, a piano, in the last subscription contest of the Janesville Gazette and for the past four years has been a very successful teacher. The groom is a well known young man, highly respected.
Mr. and Mrs. Gransee will visit at several other places and on their return will make their home at Evansville. They received many beautiful and useful presents.

NOW IS THE TIME TO PREPARE BEDS

Geo. J. Kellogg Written on Strawberry Culture and How They Should Be Cared For.

Editor Gazette:

Now is the time to prepare the old strawberry bed for next season, or if you have a new bed, more than two years old, and it is all grass and clover and the bed seems exhausted, it is hardly worth renewing, but if you have no better bed for next year, don't plow it up, but now the weeds above the plants, and let it bear what it will, sometimes a bad weed wonders in among the grass and weeds. Once I had to go to my Neighbor Drake to buy from his grassy field to fill my orders.

If you have a field or garden patch that is to be renewed, and it is badly rooted in the soil, or if it is infested by insects, now the patch is close to the ground as possible, rake the leaves and burn them; in large fields sometimes it is safe to loosen up the mulch and leaves with a hay tender and in a strong wind burn the bed, but it is too hot and dry to do so unless by an experienced hand, but it is best to rake and burn the leaves, let the foliage be clean and healthy, put a disk cultivator in and pulverize between the rows, cutting up so as to leave the row of plants 10 inches wide and then with a hoe thin out the old plants so they will be 10 inches apart, put on a generous dressing of well rotted stable manure, and cultivate it in.

Before the disk cultivators came, I have used a plow between the rows and raised the ground so high that

Witching

Post Toasties

starts the appetite and

No cooking—ready to serve from the package

with cream and sugar—

In dragging it down I have covered every plant out of sight, but they came on and gave me next season 250 bushels per acre of fine strawberries.
In small beds where you do not use a plow or mow the foliage, take a spade, run it under the plants and wanted, remove them, fork or spade up the space so cleared, pulverize it thoroughly, fertilize well, thin out the old plants, rake the runners to the edge, water and by thorough work seedling a bed may be kept eight years. But a strawberry bed is at its best the first season it bears, the best plan is to set out a bed or two rows every year and when the old bed is worthless spade it under.

Spring is by all means the best time to set strawberries, but if you have no bed for next season, as you dig your new potato ground spade
it up, rake it down fine and in August, just after a good rain, get plants enough of this season's growth and put out a bed. Don't set strawberries after strawberries or on new and grumpy. Don't go to an old bed for new plants, get plants from beds that have never borne.

After the strawberry season was nearly over, I picked, June 30th, from a bed 20 ft. long and 20 inches wide, four and one-half quarts of very fine berries of a late variety, this shows what a small bed will do if of the right kind and having good care, and this new variety bids fair to give good pickings for two weeks into July.

STATE TOURNAMENT
INTERESTS GOLFERS

Some Surprises in Store For Players
at La Crosse Next Week Announced.

The sensation of the spring in the golfing circles of Wisconsin is the announcement from Kenosha that R.
P. Cavanaugh, present champion, who first won the state title when a boy of 17, will not attend the state tournament at La Crosse July 12 to 16 to defend his title. He has twelve won the championship but business affairs
this year will prevent his presence.
His absence, however, rather adds to the interest in the meet than detracts from it for with him in the field, the outcome would practically be decided before play began unless some stroke-of bad luck put him out of competition. His absence, any of whom may well expect to win the title.

Kenosha will send a big team of players. Their team will include T. E. Ahern, Harold Wyatt, S.
L. Wyatt, A. G. Dana, G. B. Ives, T.
C. Everett, J. W. Thurston, Ed. Brucker, R. M. Mitchell and Henry Fellows.
Fond du Lac had a candidate who will come well to the front this year in Harold Wyatt who although only a youngster, is playing great golf. It is hardly likely that his experience and class can win him the title but stranger things have happened.

Kenosha will have a good field in the event, including at least four championship possibilities. The Yula and Pettit families can always be counted upon to furnish championship candidates.

La Crosse, which is to be host for the state association, is very carefully saying nothing about its aspirants but it is understood that there are three home talent men who will be among the possibilities.

Milwaukee will have a likely candidate for the Wisconsin State Golf championship at the tournament to be held at La Crosse July 12 in Ned Allis, the son of Louis Allis, a member of the Milwaukee Country Club.
Ned is a youngster who has been playing golf since he was in his teens and was a member of the Milwaukee Country Club. It was at the Milwaukee Country Club that he defeated Frank Jacobs of Madison, the former state champion in the finals for one of the cups and the youngster went under the bogey to do the trick.

Since that time, he has been abroad but has been playing in France when not in school and although the Milwaukee Country Club people are keeping silent as to the development of his game, it is certain that he is being groomed for the title.

PLAN INCREASE IN
THRESHING RATES

Thirty-five Threshers in Rock and Walworth Counties Decide to Raise Prices.

At a recent meeting of some thirty threshers who do business in Rock and Walworth counties it was decided to raise the prices for threshing during the coming season. Oats and barley, which have cost two cents per bushel, will now cost the farmers two and a half cents, and wheat and rye, which formerly were four cents a bushel, will be five, while timothy, the price for which varied from ten upwards, will now be fifteen cents straight.

ONE OF UNCLE SAM'S MOST DAR-ING ARMY OFFICERS DYING.
Gen. Fred Funston, the man who captured Aguinaldo.

Leavenworth, Kas.—Gen. Frederick Funston, credited with being one of the most daring officers in the army, lies at his home here dangerously ill from an attack of heart disease. He is at present commandant of the army service schools.

General Funston came into general
notice when he captured Aguinaldo, Philippine insurgent general. He is a comparatively young man, being but 45 years of age.

General Funston's career has been active along many lines outside of the army. He was born in Ohio, but at an early age moved with his family to Kansas. As a boy he studied in the Johns, Kas., high school, from which he was graduated and later studied at the University of Kansas. Upon graduation he became reporter on a Kansas City paper. When but 25 years old he gained a considerable reputation for daring when he accompanied the United States Death valley expedition as botanist.

The next government appointment was to explore Alaska and report on its flora. This expedition entailed much hardship, including a winter trip down the Yukon alone in a canoe. Upon his return he enlisted in the Cuban insurgent army, where he served with such marked credit that he was promoted from captain to major and then to lieutenant colonel.

During his service in Cuba General Funston was wounded severely in action and this forced his return to the United States. After a year spent in reconvalescing he went to the Philippines as commanding colonel of the Twentieth Kansas Infantry.

One of the most daring exploits ever attempted by any army officer was successfully carried out by General Funston while in the Philippines.
It became necessary for the United States troops to cross the Rio Grande river at Calumpit. In order to do this General Funston volunteered to cross the river in a small bamboo raft. In the face of a heavy fire, thereby establishing a rope ferry, by means of which the troops were able to cross and win the battle. In view of his bravery he was promoted to the rank of brigadier general and awarded a medal of honor.

Farmers' Institute for 1910-1911.
Any farmer or public-spirited business man in Wisconsin who wishes to secure an institute for his locality during the winter of 1910-1911 should send to us for a blank petition and letter of information. Any town, no matter how small or how far from the railroad, is entitled to an institute.
provided it is located in a farming district and has a good hall in which a meeting can be held. Farmers should talk this matter up with their neighbors and if the sentiment seems favorable for an institute for their town they should write us at once for application blanks. Address all communications to Geo. McKorrows, Supt.

WORLD'S GREATEST NAVAL GUN-NER IS A LAD OF 20 YEARS.
Alexander Campbell, U. S. N.

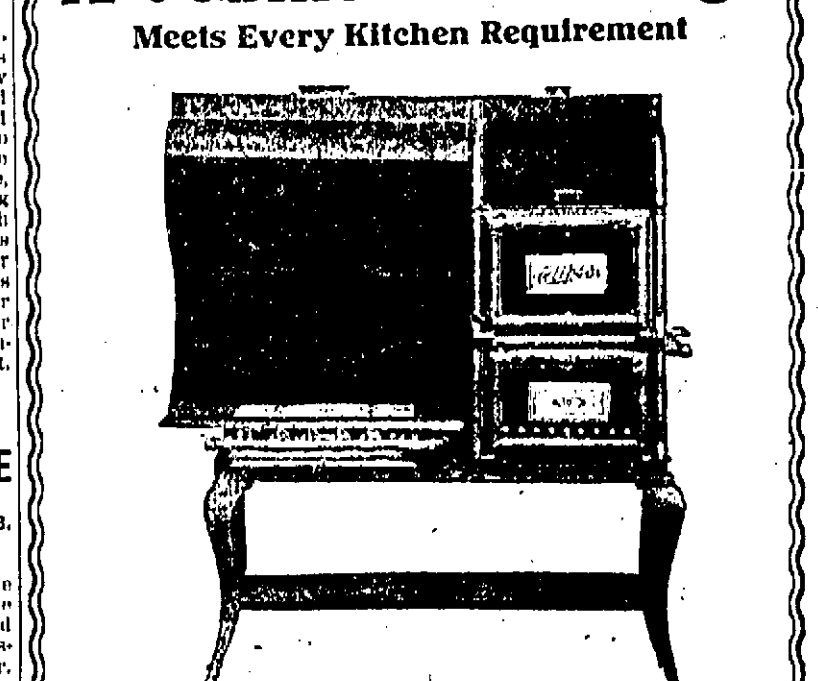

(By Special Correspondent.)
Bozoye City, Mich.—Alexander Campbell, whose home is in this city and who is now 20 years of age, holds the world's record as gunner in the American navy. He sails on the U. S. battle ship Kansas and has been in all parts of the world during his time in the government service. He broke the world's record by placing 10 shots in a target four feet square at a distance of 10 miles, a feat which has never been accomplished before in the history of the navy. His mother and several brothers and sisters live in this city.

Cynical Ruminations.
"Paying a marriage license," says the Philosopher of Polly, "is like getting a set of de Luxe French books from an agent. You only pay one dollar down, and it seems cheap. But you go on paying big installments the rest of your life."

A Happy Ending.
"Did your novel have a happy ending?" inquired the friend.
"I should say so," replied the author,
"I got a big check from the publisher
as soon as I delivered the manuscript."

How small a portion of our life it is that we really enjoy. In youth we are looking forward to things that are to come. In old age we are looking backward to things that are gone past. In manhood, although we appear indeed to be more occupied in things that are present, even that is too often absorbed in vague determinations to be vastly happy on some future day when we have time.

Reform, like charity, must begin at home. ## The Ticklemouse

—and his Sleepyland Adventures
By Roy Rutherford Bailey with Davy and Dorfy

The Eye Doctor

"W H Y, Teddy, Teddy dear, what's the matter?" cried Dorfy, bending over her beloved bear with tears in her eyes.

The Ticklemouse seemed surprised, too. For Willy had only just wished Teddy alive, and here the jolly bear was growling and gnashing his teeth, rolling over on the rug and moaning as if in terrible pain.

"My eyes, oh, my eyes!" he sobbed, when at last they could make out his words. "I'm blind—I know I am! Wait till I get hold of that scoundrel Taft!" And in broken, moaning words, he told how the twins' big cat, Taft, had slipped into the nursery and scratched out both his eyes.

"Dear me, this is serious!" squeaked the Ticklemouse, for Teddy was suffering tortures, and Davy and Dorfy were crying. "Willy, bring the goose-plane, quick, and we'll take him to an eye doctor!"

The four friends, with Teddy in their midst, flew over the village and into the forest. "The woods people are the best doctors," said the Ticklemouse. "If we can only find one of them at home! Here's a tree house that looks inviting—let's try this."

They stopped and knocked on the hollow tree house. Suddenly the Mouse sniffed the air in great alarm, but it was too late. A cat-like voice roared from within "Who's there?" "Friends!" trembled the Mouse, "with a sick bear to be cured for. Are you an eye doctor, sir?"

Open flew the door, and a pair of blazing eyes glared at them angrily. The mice stiffened with fear—it was a wildcat!

Luckily he didn't see them plainly. "Get out of here," he screamed in a terrible voice, "or I scratch his eyes out!"

The Mouse put spurs to the goose, and was too badly scared to stop for a long time. Then he pulled up at a hollow log house and knocked with a long stick, so as not to come too near.

A deep voice asked the same question, and a shaggy head popped out at them when the Mouse told their errand as before. "Climb out of here," roared the owner of the house, "or

I'll scratch ALL your eyes out!"

"Why, that was a bear!" said Teddy when the startled goose had carried them less than a mile. "I could tell by his voice. Why didn't you stop?"

"Stop, indeed!" muttered the Ticklemouse, nudging Willy in the ribs. "Any time I stir up the bear tribe—Hello! There's somebody!" He reined in at the foot of a great oak. Two round eyes blazed at them from the darkness above.

"You ask him this time," whispered the Ticklemouse to Willy, and Willy asked in a quivering squeak.

"Who?" asked a deep voice from overhead suspiciously. "Who?"

Willy burst out laughing. "Why, it's Mr. Owl!" he cried. "Guess he won't offer to scratch our eyes out, after we were so kind to him, 'tother night.' And he told the wise old owl all about Teddy's trouble."

The Owl put on his specs and thought. Then he got out a big book and began turning the pages by the light of a torch. "Have you tried the bramble bush?" he asked at last. "That worked first time with a Man in Our Town!"

"Cor-RECT!" shouted the Ticklemouse, "and a thousand thanks!" They sped through the sky to the bramble bush, and it was only the work of a moment for Teddy to scratch his eyes in again.

"And just to think," said the Mouse when they were back in the nursery again, "that I forgot that old prescription! I got a look at the back of his medicine book, and—it was nothing more or less than a copy of Mother Goose!"

HUGHES FOR CHIEF JUSTICE

NEW YORK GOVERNOR WILL PROBABLY SUCCEED MELVILLE W. FULLER.

TWO VACANCIES ON BENCH

It is said at Capitol Lloyd W. Bowers will succeed Justice Moody upon his retirement from Supreme Court.

Washington, July 6.—Within the next few months President Taft will have two vacancies in the United States Supreme court to fill, owing to the death of Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller and the retirement of Associate Justice William H. Moody.

It is generally believed that Gov. Charles E. Hughes of New York, who has been confirmed as an associate justice, will be promoted to chief justice, and that Lloyd W. Bowers of Chicago, solicitor general of the department of justice, will be appointed associate justice in his place.

Bowers is qualified. The other alternative suggested is that Mr. Bowers be made chief justice, it having been understood here for some time that the president considered him qualified in all legal respects for the place. It is known, however, that President Taft has considered Governor Hughes also in this connection so far as his abilities are concerned.

In the event of the retirement of Associate Justice Moody it is believed there is a strong possibility that a Democrat will take his place. With the death of Chief Justice Fuller only two Democrats remain on the Supreme bench—Associate Justices White and Lurton. It has not been customary to make the court too top-heavy, politically, although, of course, politics cuts little figure in the decisions of that tribunal. That members of opposite parties do, however, represent different schools of thought cannot be denied.

Personnel Will Be Changed. With the filling of these vacancies the whole personnel of the court will have changed, with the exception of three members—Associate Justices Harlan, White and McKenna—since 1902. This has been the most remarkable change in the court since its establishment. President Roosevelt appointed Associate Justices Holmes, Day and Moody; President Taft, within a year, has appointed Associate Justices Lurton and Hughes.

Among other names which have been suggested for possible appointment to the bench if the appointees is to be a Republican are Judges Van Devanter, Hook and Sanborn of the Eighth circuit; Frank D. Kellogg of Minnesota and Supreme Court Justice Swayne of New Jersey.

Fuller Burial at Chicago. Burial of the late Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller will take place next Friday afternoon in Chicago.

BOMB WRECKS PASTOR'S HOME.

Building Badly Shattered—Minister's Wife Injured by Dynamite.

Neoga, Ill., July 6.—The home of Rev. R. H. Fisher, pastor of the Neoga Presbyterian church, was dynamited. The building was partly wrecked and Rev. Fisher's wife was badly injured. No clue has been found to the person who threw the bomb. Rev. Fisher had been leading the crusade against bootleggers, and it is believed that the local option law wrecked his home.

Weds Minister From Greece.

Washington, July 6.—One of the most important social events of the year in Washington was the wedding today of L. A. Coromilas, the minister from Greece, and Miss Anna E. Cockrell, daughter of former Senator Francis M. Cockrell of Missouri, who is now a member of the Interstate Commerce commission. The ceremony was witnessed by practically all of the members of the diplomatic set who are still here and by a large number of other society people.

Man Dined Alive.

Hammond, Ind., July 6.—Andrew Hild was literally boiled alive by falling in a vat of boiling cement at the Huntington Cement plant. He was fished out of the vat by fellow workmen and the flesh fell from the body.

Lumber Fire Loss Millions.

Montreal, Que., July 6.—A dispatch from Arnprior, Ont., says a fire destroyed lumber worth from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 in the Gilles lumber yards. The mills were saved.

TWO GIRLS LOCKED FOR 68 HOURS IN FREIGHT CAR.

Mary Moul and Nelsa Heforke at right, who were found nearly exhausted after a trip in a refrigerator car from Buffalo to Hoboken, during which time they were locked up and were without food or drink for 68 hours.

New York.—Fainting with hunger, their tongues swollen with thirst, two-year-old Mary Moul and eight-year-old Nelsa Heforke were taken from a refrigerator car in the Lackawanna railroad yards at Secaucus, N. J. They had been locked in the car by joking boys in Buffalo, N. Y. During the 68 hours that elapsed before their rescue their terror would not let them sleep, they had nothing to eat, and to quench their thirst they licked the tears that ran down their cheeks.

The swollen, bleeding fingers tips and broken nails of the two children, the scratched and dented inside surface of the car door, the wan faces of two mites as they were lifted out of the car in the Hoboken freight yard, were mute witnesses to the hours of agony they had endured in the 400 miles of bumping from Buffalo to New York. Alone in the darkness, close by the food and water for which they were longing the children wealed death.

"Nelsa and I never thought, when some boys said we'd find humans in the car, that they'd shut the door," little Mary, the older of the two girls, told a reporter last night just before she and her companion started back to Buffalo as guests of the Lackawanna railroad. "You see, Nelsa lives in our house, up stairs, and we were playing together. So we climbed in the car; but there wasn't no humans or anything else. The car was empty every bit. Then the door slammed shut."

"The boys laughed as the door slammed and yelled: 'Now we got you, ain't we?' And Nelsa she began to cry. I hammered on the door, but they didn't open it. I couldn't hear them any more. There was a little hole and I peeked out, but no one didn't see me, and I think some one pulled the door. The car bumped and the train jerked. I know we were moving. I yelled—screamed—and Nelsa cried, but no one came."

"We kept moving for a long time, and when I peeked outside it was getting dark. I was hungry and so was Nelsa. I said let's pray like Father Mulvihill says to when we're in trouble, and Nelsa did pray with me. We asked God to send some one to unlock the door. Well, Nelsa cried herself to sleep. She wanted her little baby—that Rosa, her mother's baby—one year old. Nelsa rocks it to sleep."

"All that night I kept walking up, 'cause it was cold. I put both arms round Nelsa, but she kept crying. So did I cry, and Nelsa was so thirsty she licked the tears off my face. And when the light came again, we both pounded on the door, but no one came. All that day we kept calling until we could hardly speak. That day the car stopped a long time several different times, but no one came. Nelsa kept

There was desperate coolness in Nathaniel's approach now. Whatever had happened he would do what Nell had threatened to do—kill Strang. And whatever had happened he would take Marion away with him if it was only her dead body that he carried in his arms. To do these things he needed strength. He advanced more slowly and drew deeper and deeper drafts of air into his exhausted lungs. At the edge of the grove surrounding the castle he paused to listen. For the first time it occurred to Nathaniel that the prophet might have assembled some of his fighters to the defense of his haven, which he knew would be one of the first places to feel the vengeance of the outraged men of the mainland. But he heard no voices ahead of him. There were no fires to betray the approach of a dog guard warning of his stealthy advance. Soon he could make out a light in the king's house. A few steps more and he saw that the door was open, as it had been on his first visit to the castle. He dodged swiftly from bush to bush, darted under the window through which he had seen Marion, leaped lightly up the broad steps and sprang into the great room, his pistol cocked in his hand.

The room was empty. He listened, but not a sound came to his ears except the rustling of a curtain in the breeze. The huge lamp over the table was burning dimly. The five doors leading from the room were tightly closed. Nathaniel held his breath, tried to still the tumultuous pounding of his heart as he waited for a sound of life—a step beyond those doors, a woman's voice, a child's cry. But none came. The stillness of desertion hovered about him. He went to one of the five doors. It was not locked. He opened it silently, with the caution of a thief, and there loomed before him a chaos of gloom.

"Hello!" he called gently. "Hello—Hello—"

There was no answer. He struck a match and advanced step by step, holding the yellow bit of flame above his head. It disclosed the narrow walls of a hall and an open door leading into another room. The match sputtered and went out and he lighted another. On a little table just outside the door was a half-burned candle and he replaced his match with this. Then he went in.

At a glance he knew that he had entered a woman's room, redolent with the perfume of flowers. On one side was a bed and close beside it a cradle with a child's toys scattered about it. The tumbled coverlets showed that both had been recently used. About the room were thrown articles of wearing apparel; a trunk had been dragged from a closet and was half-packed; everywhere was the disorder of hurried flight. For a few moments the depth of his despair held Nathaniel motionless. The castle was deserted—Marion was gone! He ran back into the great room, no longer trying to still the sound of his foot-steps, and opened a second door. The same silence greeted him, the same disorder, the same evidence that the wives and children of the Mormon king had fled. He went into a third room—and then a fourth.

For an instant he paused at the threshold of the fourth chamber. A light was burning in the room at the end of the hall. The door was closed with the exception of an inch or two. "Marion!" he called softly, and listened intently.

He went on when there was no reply, and pushed open the door. A candle was burning on a stand in front of a mirror. The room was as empty as the others. But there was no disorder here. The bed was unused, the garments in the open closet had not been disarranged. On the floor beside the bed was a pair of shoes and as Nathaniel saw them his heart seemed to leap to his throat and stifled the cry that was on his lips. He took one of them in his hand, his whole being throbbing with excitement. It was Marion's shoe—incrusted with mud and torn as he had seen it in the forest. With her name falling from his lips in a pleading cry he now searched the room and on the stand in front of the mirror he found a blue-colored ribbon, soiled and crumpled. It was Marion's ribbon—the one he had seen last in her hair, and he crushed it to his lips as he ran back into the great room, calling out her name again and again in the torture of helplessness that now possessed him.

Mechanically, rather than with reason, he went to the fifth and last door. The candle had become extinguished in his haste and after he had opened the door he stopped at the threshold of the black hall to light it again. There was a moment's pause, as he searched his pockets for a match, a silence in which he listened as he searched, and suddenly as he was about to strike the sulphur tipped splint there came to his ears a sound that held him chained to the spot. It was the sobbing of a woman; or was it a child? In a moment he knew that it was a woman; and then the sobbing ceased.

There was nothing but darkness ahead of him; no ray of light shone under the door; the chamber itself was in utter gloom. "As quietly as possible he relighted his candle. A glance assured him that this hall was different from the others; it was deeper, and there were two doors at the end instead of one. Through which of these doors had come the sound of sobbing he had heard?

He approached and listened. Each moment added to his excitement, his fears, his hopes, but at last he opened the door on the left. The room was empty; there was the same disorder as before; the same signs of hurried flight. It was the room on the right! His heart almost stopped at the beating as he placed his hand on the latch, lifted it, and pulled the door in. Kneeling beside the bed he saw a woman. She had turned toward the light and in the dim illumination of the room Nathaniel recognized the beautiful face he had seen at the king's castle the preceding day—the face of the woman who had sent him to find the prophet, who had placed her gentle hand on Marion's head as he had looked through the window. There was no fear in her eyes as she saw Nathaniel. Something more terrible than that she alone in their glorious depths as she rose to her feet and stood before him, her face lined with grief, her mouth twitching in agony. She stood with clenched hands, her bosom rising and falling in the passion of the storm within her; and she sobbed even as Nathaniel paused there, unmanned in this sudden presence of a distress greater than his own; sobbed in a choking, tearless way, waiting for him to speak.

"Forgive me," he spoke gently. "I have come—for Marion." He felt that he had no reason to lie to this woman. His face betrayed his own anguish as he came nearer to her. "I want Marion," he repeated. "My God, won't you tell me—?"

She struggled to calm herself as he spoke the girl's name. "Marion is not here," she said. She crushed his hands against her bosom and a softer look came into her eyes; her voice was low and sweet, as it had been the morning he asked for Strang. As she saw the despair deepening in the man's face a great pity swept over her and she stretched out her arms to him with an aching cry, "Marion is gone—gone—gone," she moaned, "and you must go, too. I know you love her—who told me that you loved her—who told me that you must go—no—no—no—no!" She turned away from him with a cry so heart-breaking in its pain that Nathaniel felt himself trembling to the soul. In another instant she had faced him again, fighting back a strange calm into her face.

"I love Marion," she breathed softly. "I would help you—I would help her if I could." For a moment her pale beautiful face was filled with a light that might have shone from the face of an angel. "Don't you understand?" she continued, scarcely above a whisper. "I have been Strang's one great love—his life—until Marion came into his heart. I have lost—you have lost—but mine is the more bitter because Marion loves you, and Strang—"

With a cry Nathaniel sprang to her side. The candle fell from his hand, spluttered on the floor, and left them in darkness.

"Marion loves me! You say that Marion loves me?"

The woman's voice came to him in a whisper filled with the sweetness of sympathy.

"She said so tonight—in this room. She told me that she loved you as she never thought that she could love a man in this world. O, my God, is that not a boon for your heart, if it is broken? And Strang—my Strang—has forgotten his love for me!"

Nathaniel reached out his arms. They found the woman and for a time he held her hands in his, with a great silence fell upon them. He could hear the sobbing of her breath and as her fingers tightened about his own his heart seemed bursting with its hatred of this man who called himself a prophet of God; a hatred that burned furiously even as his being throbbed with the wild joys of the words he had just heard.

"Where is Marion?" he pleaded.

"I don't know," replied the woman. "They took her away alone. The others have gone to the temple."

"Do you think she is at the temple?" he inquired insistently.

"No. One of the others came back a little while ago. She said that Marion was not there."

"Where is Strang?"

"This time he felt the woman tremble."

"Strang—"

She drew her hands away from him. There was a strange quiver in her voice.

"Yes—where is Strang?"

There came no reply.

"Tell me—where is he?"

"I don't know."

"Is he at the temple?"

"I don't know."

He could hear her stifled breath; he could almost feel her trembling, an arm's reach out there in the darkness. What a woman was this whose heart the Mormon king had broken for a new love!

"Listen," he said gently. "I am going to find Marion. I am going to take her away. Tomorrow you shall have Strang again—if he is alive!"

There was no answer and he moved slowly back to the door. He closed it after him as he entered the hall. Once in the big room he paused for a moment under the hanging lamp to examine his pistol and then went outside. The grove in which the castle stood was absolutely deserted. So far as he could see not even a guard watched over the property of the king. Nathaniel had become too accustomed to the surprises of Beaver Island to wonder at this. He could see by the lights flaring along the harbor that the castle was in an isolated position and easy of attack. From what Strang's wife had told him and the evidences of panic in the chambers of the harom he believed that the Mormon king had abandoned the castle to its fate and that the approaching conflict would center about the temple.

Was Marion at the temple? If so he realized that she was beyond his reach. But the woman had said that she was not there. Where could she have gone? Why had not Strang taken her with his wives? In a flash Nathaniel thought of Arbor Croche and Obadiah—the two men who always knew what the king was doing. If he could find the sheriff alone—if he could only nurse Obadiah back into sane life again! He thrust his pistol into his holster. There was but one thing for him to do and that was to return to the old counselor. It would be madness for him to go down to St. James. He had lost—Strang had won. But his love for Marion was undying. If he found her Strang's wife it would make no difference to him. It would all be evened up when he killed the king. For Marion loved him—loved him—

He turned his face toward Obadiah's, his heart sinking the glad words which the woman had spoken to him back there in the sixth chamber.

And as he was about to take the first step at that long race back to the mad counselor he heard behind him the approach of quick feet. He crouched behind a clump of bushes and waited. A shadowy form was hurrying through the grove. It passed close to him, mounted the castle steps and in the doorway turned and looked back for an instant in the direction of St. James.

Nathaniel's lips quivered; the pounding of his heart half choked him; a shiver of mad, terrible joy was ready to leap from his lips.

There in the dim glow of the great lamp stood Strang, the Mormon king.

Why Dander=Off Cures

WHEN Other Remedies Fail

There are many so-called dandruff cures which temporarily cleanse the scalp of dandruff scales, but unless the dandruff germ which has invaded the hair follicles is destroyed, no lasting benefit can be expected. Those remedies have, as a rule, contained from 50 to 75 per cent of alcohol—the effect of which is almost as pernicious as the dandruff germ itself in robbing the hair of its nutriment and causing it to fall out. Such tonics also cause prematurely gray hair. The wonderful cures effected by

Hughel's Dander=Off

are possible because this marvel of modern science destroys the dandruff germ without robbing the hair follicles of the natural oils on which the hair is dependent for its growth. It is almost non-alcoholic—a radical departure from the tonics of the present day. A tonic of pleasant odor—very effective and containing less than 5 per cent alcohol. It is GUARANTEED TO CURE Dandruff, Itching and Eczema scalp if used according to directions. Purchase price will be refunded in any case in which it fails.

BUSINESS MEN SHOULD LUNCH LIGHTLY

The common practice of eating hurriedly an indiscriminate mixture of food at noon in a rush to get back to business is extremely pernicious. Relaxation from the forenoon's strain will improve the mental condition for the afternoon's work, but hurried eating is always bad, and especially when work is to be immediately resumed. We are slaves of habit in eating more than in anything else, because eating is the fundamental habit, and I have learned the need for caution in advising a beneficial change, especially to the man who has not as yet the fear of the sanitarium or the hospital before his eyes, but the average business man would do better to eat at noon only a little fruit or crackers, spend some time in the open air and depend more for his nutrition upon the evening meal, eaten as early as possible.
